one omce or power in the land, and the control of legislation to a great extent, for, while the house cannot compel, it can thwart both the executive and senate, and it originates all revenue legislation and appropriation bills. Then all the officers, the chairmanships of committees and the consequent power that they give go with the successful party. It is a stake worth fighting for. While the presidential election will absorb the greatest interest, yet the men in charge of the congressional campaigns will be having a battle royal for this stake. There is, besides the control of the house, the desire to return the men with whom they have been associated.

The Republicans realize also that the residency can be won and the house in a state might be lost and its electoral vote counted for the party. This causes the anxiety of which I spoke in the beginning. ARTHUR W. DUNN.

All have returned to Henry Becker, a German, and John L. Trimmer, a Connecticut man, two poor, ragged, discouraged mining prospectors, went into the mountains of Calaveras county to cut oak wood for fuel. They expected to make something like $30 or $40 each per month during the winter by the sale of the wood. They made their home in an old abandoned miner's cabin. A heavy fall of snow had covered the ground to the depth of two or more feet.

One day the two men built a great ow and left an area of hot earth. Becker determined to make an oven digging of a hole in which to bake it. At the depth of two feet he came upon a bed of rock.
